

Table of Contents

Preface	7
Acknowledgments	9
1. Introduction: Cultural turn and speculative capital	11
1.1 Correlation matrix and speculative reason	14
1.2 Temporality and process	17
PART ONE
Art history and its threshold: process art	23
2. Roads to recursion. Some historiographical remarks on a core category of process art	25
2.1 Closed circuit as an open system	25
2.2 Closed-circuit recursions in the roaring nineties	28
2.3 Closed circuit beyond digital dogma	31
3. Reflecting thresholds. Unseen images and untold processes	35
3.1 Video as medium of speculative seeing and hearing	35
3.2 Video as a function of reality. Peter Campus	38
3.3 Bill Viola's closed circuit video, 1972–76.	44
3.4 Patterns of transition	71
4. Process art in education, research and archiving. Two case studies.	75
4.1 Video art at the Düsseldorf Art Academy, 1976–96: the educational and technological context.	75
4.2 Finite technology and infinite aesthetics	87
4.3 Caught while escaping: a personal retro-perspective	93
4.4 Process art, archives and databases	97
4.5 Process art in networked research communities.	102
PART TWO
Visual culture and its threefold delimitation: mirrors, frames, immediacy	115
5. Mirroring the invisible. Culture, technology and (self-)observation	117
5.1 Mirror and image: the extension of light and mirror spectra	121
5.2 Liquid mirrors: art and commerce, nature and architecture.	125

6. Margins moved to the middle. Process art within visual studies	133
6.1 Visual culture and visual communication: theoretical framing	133
6.2 Process art and the syntax of dynamisation	136
6.3 Camera. Monitor. Frame. Takahiko Iimura	145
7. On speculative difference	151
7.1 Framing fossils: on origins, images and acts	152
7.2 Will the image have the last word?	169

PART THREE

Tracking back and look ahead: heritage and environment 179

8. Culture as capital in media democracy. Envisioning the post-visual condition.	181
8.1 The political economy of the game: aleatoric agony.	181
8.2 Mirroring the mass-mediation: the democratization of photography.	192
8.3 Speculative difference revisited: Magic realism and rational symbolism	205
9. Great Dane meets Dalmatian. Ejnar Dyggve and the mapping of Christian archaeology	217
9.1 Frames and frontiers, crossroads and continuities	220
9.2 Mapping motifs and methodologies	223
9.3 The beginnings of architectural historiography	226
9.4 Province, frontier, periphery: mapping the cultures between Jelling and Salona	236
9.5 Rewind to the future: recent research on Dyggve in context	260
10. Coreless. Bacteria, art, and other incommodities	263
10.1 Big bacteria: a future framework for the arts, sciences and humanities	263
10.2 Life, death and dusty rebirth: bacterial circuits and infinitesimal aesthetics	271
List of Illustrations.	295
References by Chapter	303
Bibliography by Chapter	339
Author's references	374
Index	377